Excerpt: . . . You must first look at the necessities of the cat-e and after that its usefulness. So that dock was built and I have been in favor of docks ever since, and whenever there is a place that ought to be built up, as docks in the city of New York, I am in favor of then and although I have not the eloquence of a Van Wyck, I have some knowledge of the subject because I have been practicing it and carrying the stuff on barges nearly all my life, and I know that this is right, I know that that canal should be built for the interest of you and for the interest of the people of this great city and of this whole State. (Applause.) Now, gentlemen, there are other people who wish to be heard and I am sure that with the business ability that lies in the commissioners that we are addressing here today that our case is safe. I have been before commissions when I did not think the case was safe: I did not think the men were broad enough, but we have now broad-minded men, and I say it with truth and with knowledge. I have known every dock commissioner for the last forty years, I have been on speaking terms with them and have helped them get things when I could, and I have known the Superintendents of Public Works and I have known the...
