Not illustrated. 1883 Excerpt: .herself in respect to her own failures and shortcomings. She was a young wife, having been married only a few months. She had commenced housekeeping only a short time before, and like all young housekeepers she necessarily made a great many mistakes, and met with a great many failures. Her errors and mistakes in her housekeeping, and in her other duties as a wife, were at least as many, in proportion, as those of her scholars in their compositions. INow, suppose that her husband had come and taken a seat by her side on the sofa on Saturday evening, when the week was ended, and had said to her in a kind and affectionate manner: Now, my dear, I know you wish to improve as a wife and as a housekeeper, and in order to help you I have been observing during this week all your errors, failures, and short-comings, and have remembered them all, and now I am going to tell you what they all are, so that you may avoid them next week, and thus more rapidly improve. And then suppose he were to go on to criticize all her conduct and her management, and point out every fault and failing he had observed. Would this be the way to lead her on to improvement in the performance of her duties? How Mary Osborne managed with her class, on the day when the compositions were presented, will appear in the next chapter, or the...
