Excerpt: . . . for his truth, for his Majesty hath kepted us still in suspense all this time, and as he has mingled our former steps with fear, so now he keeps us in the same temper, to the end our rejoicing might as it should be; but if we will continue to do as we have begun, in supplication to our God and our King, and set our face towards our Lord, and hold the rule of his word before our eyes, and make Himself our fear and our dread, we need not to think anything else, and acknowledge his sovereignty over all his creatures. This is the short cut and perfect rule by which our goings must be ordered, and if in this path we meet with hard trouble, sweet and solid comfort will be the upshot of them all, provided we could wait with...
