To the reader in the five counties first mentioned - the new area we are embracing - I would, then, say that I desire to make the Home Counties Magazine a useful and popular topographical publication. Topography is a very comprehensive word, and I use it in its most catholic sense. Particularly do I ask that scraps of local information, such as we are all constantly lighting upon, and which are as constantly lost for lack of a suitable place of deposit, may be sent to the new magazine. I also ask that its pages may be used as a medium for eliciting, by queries and replies, information on different points connected with the area we cover; so that The Home Counties Magazine may become for London, for the places in which Londoners reside, and the places they often visit, what the old, yet ever new, Notes and Queries is for Great and Greater Britain. I believe that it is perfectly possible to treat accurately and usefully, matters topographical from a popular standpoint. This I shall endeavour to do, and by so doing, to make more wide-spread than it is, a thirst for that knowledge of the things of yesterday, which...
